Although the Internet has revolutionized the job search process, networking remains the number one method for finding employment. The most successful job hunters use these essential strategies:

- a clear focus on the job desired
- a targeted resume that demonstrates experience and skills
- a “big tent” search that taps multiple resources
- a willingness to respond to advertised openings and to initiate contact with employers
- a dogged persistence in realizing your goal

All of the following resources will help you conduct your comprehensive, successful job search.

ADVERTISED POSITIONS

Review the help-wanted ads of your city’s major newspapers and visit their corresponding Web sites (i.e., The Boston Globe’s www.boston.com/jobs). Additionally, industry-specific professional associations and trade journals often advertise available positions in print and online.

TARGETED INTERNET POSTINGS

Many Internet sites list positions and update them regularly. In addition to popular sites (monster.com, craigslist.com, indeed.com, etc.), identify sites specific to your career interests for more targeted listings. For example, www.idealista.org is an excellent site for opportunities in nonprofit organizations; the American Marketing Association’s site, www.ama.boston.org, is specific to both the field and the city. Additionally, employers actively seeking to recruit Suffolk students post available positions directly to our office’s job site, www.suffolk.erecruiting.com.

PROFESSIONAL AND TRADE ASSOCIATIONS
Tapping the resources of professional and trade associations in your niche is essential. Virtually every career field has professional associations that respond to the needs of their constituencies. For example, the Northeast Human Resources Association assists human resource professionals and students who aspire to join this field. Associations are great resources for your job hunt as they post job openings online; offer networking opportunities at workshops, conferences, and social gatherings; provide the names and contact information of association officers; and inform job seekers of current industry trends.

For a list, refer to “Resources and Professional Associations by Career Field” on page 5

NETWORKING
Asking contacts for referrals is one of the most effective and efficient ways to meet the professionals who may help your search. The University’s Alumni Career Advisory Network (ACAN) provides a large bank of contacts who have volunteered to help Suffolk students. You should also consider any group with which you are affiliated—college, high school, family, friends, health club, special interests groups, etc.—as a potential networking source. Connections are out there; you must be willing to ask for their advice and assistance.

For more information, refer to “Accessing the Alumni Network,” “The Art of Networking,” and “Networking Questions” on pages 12–15

TARGETED DIRECT MAIL CONTACT
You can also generate leads and interviews by initiating direct contact with employers of interest. For example, if your niche is biotechnology, you can identify key employers in the field and approach them. In addition to our office, the Sawyer Library has many resources that will help you identify these employers. To enhance your chances of success, send a targeted cover letter and resume to the hiring manager of chosen companies, outlining your interests, strengths, and assets. Follow-up a week later with the goal of meeting in person to discuss current or future hiring needs.

For a list of 35+ industry-specific employers, refer to “The Book of Lists” on page 16

STAFFING AGENCIES/EXECUTIVE SEARCH FIRMS
Agencies fill entry-level support, administrative, and professional positions. Executive search firms specialize in working with more senior management-level job-seekers. Seek out agencies that focus on your niche (i.e., finance, IT, nonprofit, marketing, etc.) or ask friends if they have had any positive experiences with agencies. Temporary and temporary-to-permanent situations may also prove viable options—especially if they help you build marketable skills and relevant experiences. Generally, employers pay placement fees directly to these staffing firms, so there is no cost to you.

For a list of these agencies, refer to “Staffing Agencies, Temporary Placement Firms, and Executive Search Firms” on page 22

JOB FAIRS
Job fairs give you the opportunity to meet directly with multiple employers in a concentrated time frame. Though employers do not extend job offers at career expos, they do prescreen candidates and extend invitations to interview at a later date. Job fairs may cover a wide variety of interests or may be industry-specific (for instance, idealist.org holds a nonprofits job fair and our office holds the annual Meet the Firms Public Accounting Expo).

For more information, refer to “Job Fairs” on page 18. Plus, visit the Events section of www.suffolk.edu/careers for a listing of upcoming job fairs or the Calendar section of suffolk.erecruiting.com

ON-CAMPUS RECRUITING
Graduating students may interview with employers who visit our campus. These employers will prescreen and select candidates to interview.

For more information, refer to “On-Campus Recruiting” on page 19

PART-TIME, INTERNSHIP, AND FREELANCE OPTIONS
While most graduating students seek full-time positions with benefits, you should not dismiss the possibilities offered by part-time positions and internships. These positions can help you build your skill-set, enhance your experience, expand your network, and make you more competitive for permanent positions.
Job Search Groups

Career-related groups present another way to network, increase job search savvy, and learn of job openings. For example, Media Bistro, an association for media professionals, hosts networking nights for job-seekers hoping to connect with potential employers. There are more general groups, too, like WIND Networking and ExecuNet, that can offer you advice and prospective leads.

For more information, refer to “Job Search Groups” on page 27

ACCESSING THE ALUMNI NETWORK

Suffolk’s Alumni Career Advisory Network (ACAN) lists alumni who are willing to talk with current students and fellow alumni about their careers, industry information, and possible job referrals and leads. ACAN represents alumni working in a wide range of industries and fields.

To access ACAN,
• Go to www.suffolk.edu/alumni
• Enter the Online Community
• Alumni and students in their last year at Suffolk may register for online access via the “first-time user” prompt. Other students must speak with a career counselor before getting access.
• Explore potential contacts in both the online directory and ACAN.
• Search these resources for alumni who meet your parameters regarding career field, industry of interest, specific employer, location, etc. Usually, two of these criteria (for example, location and field) will give you a good list from which to work.
• Send an email to alumni indicating your Suffolk connection, ACAN, and your interest in seeking their career-related advice (ideally in a 30-minute meeting). Schedule a phone appointment if the contact is either long-distance or unable to meet you in person. You may also gain valuable information over email.

THE ART OF NETWORKING

WHAT IS NETWORKING?
• Seeking people who can offer career information, ideas, advice, and access
• Developing long-lasting professional connections
• Identifying the “hidden” job market—those opportunities that may not be advertised
• Helping others by making introductions and sharing information
• Asking people for information, not for jobs

WHO DO YOU NETWORK WITH?
• Everyone you know—friends, family, acquaintances, classmates
• Suffolk alumni, including those in the Alumni Career Advisory Network
• Professional associations and conferences
• Linkedin.com and listservs serving your chosen profession

WHAT ARE INFORMATIONAL INTERVIEWS?
• The ultimate goal of networking—30-minute meetings with contacts for career advice
• Your chance to ask targeted questions about the contact’s field and company
• Helpful discussions that may lead to referrals, job leads, and unique resources
• Encounters with professionals in your field with whom you can follow-up in the future
Come to an informational interview prepared with questions. Here are some suggestions.

ASK ABOUT YOUR CONTACT
- How did you get into this field? What special skills did you have before entering it?
- What aspects do you like and dislike most about your job?
- Who do you interact with on a regular basis?
- What is a typical day like?
- What information must you have to succeed and advance in this job/industry?
- How is your workplace culture? How does it compare to your past experiences?
- What do you enjoy the most, and least, about your job?
- Would you consider working in related fields? If so, which?

ASK ABOUT THE FIELD/INDUSTRY
- What market and employment trends affect this industry?
- Who are the market leaders and how did they earn their leadership?
- What are the emerging/growing companies?
- How would my background mesh with this field?
- Are people in this industry receptive to people coming from other industries?
- Could I investigate this field via an internship?
- What are other sources of information about this industry?
- What are the salary ranges for people at various levels in this industry?
- Do you recommend certain professional associations?
- Is there anyone else you think I should contact?

ASK FOR PERSONAL FEEDBACK
- Would you be willing to suggest how I might improve the content and format of my resume?
- Based on my background, what kinds of jobs do you think I should consider?
- Which skills are most valued by employers?
- May I stay in touch with you?

Job fairs are an excellent way for you to get a sense of the market. You can make these events work for you by keeping abreast of the dates of upcoming fairs, researching the employers who are scheduled to attend them, and arriving with a polished resume.

Suffolk University participates in and hosts a number of annual job fairs.

Career Services presents these job fairs for Suffolk students:
- Meet the Firms Night (for public accounting) ~ September 23, 2009
- Graduate Student Career Expo ~ November 4, 2009
- Connections Full-Time Job Fair ~ March 10, 2010

We participate in collaborative career events with other Boston-area colleges such as the:
- AHANA-Related Fairs
- Marketing/Communication Career Expo ~ September 21, 2009
- Northeastern University Job Fair ~ October 8, 2009, and February 2010 ~ www.neu.edu
- Women for Hire Job Fair ~ December 10, 2009 ~ www.womenforhire.com
- Diversity Career Fair for Public and Private Schools (K–12) ~ February 6, 2010 ~ www.nemnet.com
- Government Career Expo ~ February 16, 2010 ~ tmarchan@suffolk.edu
- Environmental, Energy, and Engineering Career Fair ~ February ~ www.ebcne.org
- Idealist.org Nonprofit Career Fair ~ February 2010 ~ www.idealista.org
- MIT European Career Fair ~ winter 2010 ~ www.euro-career.com
- Massachusetts Education Recruiting Consortium (K–12) ~ April 2010

If you are currently a senior or are in your final year of graduate school, you are eligible to participate in on-campus recruiting.

In order to learn more about upcoming recruiter visits and how to register for them, you must create an account on suffolk.erecruiting.com. Contact Terry Wells, recruiting coordinator, at twells@suffolk.edu for the token/password to this Web site. Once you have created your account, you will be able to upload your resume and cover letter files for potential employers to review. You also have the opportunity to search for jobs advertised only by Career Services or by other career offices.

Once you find a position that interests you, apply for it. Your application will be stored until the deadline, at which time all applications will be emailed to an employer for review. The employer must email you letting you know whether you have been accepted or declined for an interview on campus. If you are accepted, you will have automatic access to the interview schedule, and you can choose your designated time. The Calendar section of suffolk.erecruiting.com also lists upcoming events scheduled on and off campus.
THE ART OF INTERVIEWING

PREPARING YOURSELF

As always, it is essential to have a professional demeanor when you go on an interview. The old adage about dressing for success rings true—by presenting yourself in a professional manner, you will send a clear signal to employers that you are ready and eager to be a successful employee. Before you arrive at each interview, research the job opportunity, employer, and industry—and how you can contribute to them.

Before you go on the actual interview, conduct a mock interview with a colleague or member of our staff to hone your message and polish your delivery.

Be prepared to answer these questions:

Why are you interested in this position?

What do you bring to this career opportunity?

How would you/have you responded to this type of situation?

What are your greatest strengths and weaknesses?

Where would you like to be professionally in five years?

What are you looking for in a position and supervisor?

When you prepare for an interview, think of a number of specific situations from your work history, academic experience, or community service that credibly demonstrate you have the skills needed to thrive in this job. In this way, you’ll be prepared for a fruitful interview!

PRESENTING YOURSELF

At an actual interview, be positive, pleasant, and persuasive. You truly do have just one chance to make a great first impression—make yours last. Establish a comfortable rapport with your interviewer and maintain a conversational tone. During the interview, focus on establishing the connection between the employer’s needs (as detailed in the job description) and your relevant skills and experiences. The likeability quotient is key—the employer is seeking someone who can do the job competently but who also can fit in with the other members of the department and overall organizational culture. This is also your chance to ask questions about the job opening and to learn more about the company for which you may soon work. Being inquisitive shows that you are motivated and interested to learn more about how you may fit in at your future workplace.

If you are enthusiastic about a job opportunity, let your potential employer know it unequivocally at the end of an interview. Allow a week to elapse before sending a thank-you note or email to those you met with to express your continued interest.
There are hundreds of staffing firms in Boston offering opportunities—from full-time permanent to temporary to temporary-to-permanent positions—across a range of fields. Here are a few our counselors recommend.
